Library and Audio-Visual Aids Programs To Be Expanded

1957-19
C.1

Wilson Hall Library at the college in Indiana will spend about $30,000 a year for each of the next two years for books and publications in order to meet the goal the college has set to have 60,000 volumes by 1960, Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college, indicated here today.

The college is in the process of conducting a $25,000 fund drive among alumni and interested persons for buying book stock for the Wilson Hall Library.

This amount, added to the regular college budget allocation of $17,000 for each of the next two years, will make the amount available in the two-year period approximately $30,000 for the 1957-58 year and about the same for the 1958-59 college year.

During the past several years alumni reunion classes have sponsored the refurnishing of the various rooms in Wilson Hall Library. This project has now been completed.

Now, with the addition of a graduate study program, it has become increasingly imperative that the library in Wilson Hall have the number of volumes increased as rapidly as possible.

It is expected that the fund drive among alumni and friends of the college will achieve the $25,000 goal, and the college has also indicated that it will furnish upwards of $34,000 from the regular college budget for the purchase of books in the next two years.

The number of volumes in the college library now stands at approximately 50,000. It appears very likely that the book stock will be raised to over the 60,000 volume figure by 1960.

It is also anticipated, Dr. Pratt said, that the college will try to reach 100,000 volumes in the library as soon as possible after the 60,000 goal has been reached.

The college at Indiana, President Willis E. Pratt points out, has also developed an audio-visual aids program that ranks with the best in the country. During the past several years the college has acquired a very adequate film collection known as the Indiana State Teachers College film library, numbering over 1,200 films.

In addition, the library has tie-ins with national libraries that make it possible to get many additional films.

Dr. Pratt points out that at the beginning of this current academic year, the organization for the administration of the audio-visual education program has undergone a very significant change.

The responsibility for the operation of the film library has been assumed by the College Cooperative Association, and a non-instructional staff member, John M. Fetterman of 563 College Avenue, Indiana, Pa., has been employed for the purpose of handling the technical aspects of this library and the distribution of films among the many schools in the area.

A faculty member, J. Robert Murray, who is the director of audio-visual education, has been placed in charge of audio-visual aids on the campus; and the film library, which is only a part of this service, will be under his general direction.

An additional staff member, Norman W. Sargent, has been employed to teach and work in the audio-visual aids area.

The college has, during the past several years, secured dozens of various audio-visual education instruments including silent and sound projectors of various sizes, film strip projectors, recordings, tape recorders, opaque projectors, and other instruments.

A catalog of all available equipment and materials and their location is being prepared by the audio-visual education department for faculty, and catalogs of the films will be available for persons in the area schools or in the general public who might wish to get films on a rental basis.

Indiana Has Been Given Right To Revise Own Curricula

For the first time within the memory of many living educators, state teachers colleges in Pennsylvania have been given the responsibility for developing their own several curricula, Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the State Teachers College at Indiana, states.

This autonomy in curriculum development means simply that the State Teachers College at Indiana will be able to develop courses of study for its students in keeping with the facilities of the college, the abilities of the college faculty, and the factors which are peculiar to Indiana as a college.

This responsibility for curriculum development makes it possible for every teachers college in the Commonwealth to allow for its own individual differences in the development of courses of study, and it will no longer be necessary for every teachers college to conform to an established pattern that would apply to all teachers colleges in the state.

To explore the possibilities in curriculum development at Indiana State Teachers College Dr. Pratt has appointed a faculty-student curriculum committee which will have Dr. Edward Carr of the English department as chairman and will include the following faculty members:

Dr. Pratt states that "It shall be the primary responsibility of the curriculum committee to determine the program of general education and professional education which shall be required in each curriculum and to review these proposals for specialized preparation in the several curricula which are developed by the departments of the college."

Dr. Pratt indicates that he anticipates that the curriculum committee and departments of the college will be able to submit these new courses of study for approval by January 1, 1958.

In developing the new courses of study the curriculum committee and the departments of the college involved will weigh carefully the requirements of the several professional organizations involved and the proposed certification regulations which are now before the State Council of Education.

College Provides Extra Study Opportunities In Four Ways

In four important ways, Indiana State Teachers College is providing extra study opportunities for students and interested people in the area during the present year, Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college, points out.

The first of these is through the graduate program which began this year on September 10 and initially offers courses leading to a master's degree in elementary education.

The second is in the Saturday campus classes which began September 14, 1957. The third is the college community studies program which will begin early in October, and the fourth is an educational television course.

These four varieties of study programs are designed to meet different needs of people. The graduate program is for the purpose of increasing the background of elementary teachers in public schools.

Saturday campus classes are for the purpose of providing an opportunity for courses leading to permanent certification as a teacher, for additional certification, or background enrichment.

The college community studies series are for the purpose of enriching the educational background of adults in the community.

During the 1957-58 college year, Indiana State Teachers College will give two courses for credit over WQED in Pittsburgh.

The first, a course in approaches to twentieth century poetry, is being offered Wednesday evenings from 6:45 to 7:30 p.m. beginning September 11. This course is taught by Dr. William W. Betts, Jr.

During the second semester Dr. Dorothy M. Snyder will offer a course in diagnostic and remedial reading.

Indiana State Teachers College is interested in educational television, a relatively new medium of instruction, on an experimental basis.

The graduate program in elementary education at Indiana State Teachers College has been developed during the past year by the director of graduate studies, Dr. I. L. Stright, and a graduate council composed of Dr. Edward W. Bieghler, Dr. Ralph W. Cordier, Dr. John E. Davis, Dr. S. Trevor Hadley, William E. Lafranchi, Dr. P. David Lott, Dr. Joy Mahachek, Arthur F. Nicholson, Dr. Dwight Sollberger, Dr. George A. W. Stouffer, and Dr. Albert J. Wahl.

The philosophy which has directed development of this program is based on the principle that for elementary students breadth of preparation is needed instead of depth.

To this end a large portion of the proposed graduate program for elementary education majors lies in the field of general education spread for the most part across the several curricula and departments in the college.

The graduate council and special committees of the college faculty will, during the coming year, study the possibilities of the development of courses in the several fields in secondary education and in other special fields for which approval will be sought in the near future.

Honors Programs For Top Students In Offing At Indiana College

Special programs for studies for especially good students may be inaugurated at the State Teachers College, Indiana, Pennsylvania, in the near future, Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college states.

College administration and faculty members are now probing the possibility of beginning an honors program in the various curricula of the college.

Two special committees of the faculty have been established for the purpose of carrying on this study, and they will report to the entire faculty group at a meeting early in February, 1958.

Dr. Pratt points out that the establishment of an honors program is not necessarily new to American collegiate institutions, since this program was inaugurated in several colleges thirty years ago, and is now utilized in about 100 colleges and universities.

The basic premise of an honors program on the college level suggests that the college should provide for a challenging program for those gifted students who make up from five to ten per cent of the student body.

The problem of how to take care of the especially gifted has been a difficult challenge to the elementary and secondary schools of the country for many years, and the problem has eluded solution.

It is believed that an honors program on the college level has a very good opportunity of being successful.

Dr. Pratt explains that the kind and extent of experiences in which gifted college students should engage is a very intriguing problem.

In some institutions this has been reflected in an enriched program for all students, but in most institutions an honors program has largely concerned itself with the top five or ten per cent of able students.

The possibility is that the Indiana faculty will explore various plans for an honors program to include extensive reading projects, programs of internship, seminars utilized in lieu of class meetings, group work projects, opportunities to enter advanced courses, independent study programs, and a myriad of other curricula adjustments which might meet the demand of the most able students.

Dr. Pratt points out that it is widely recognized that the range of ability in most college classes is wide, and that college counseling generally is concentrated on the weak students.

The honors program at Indiana, Dr. Pratt states, will attempt to provide a program which will challenge the most gifted students who, in the final analysis, are likely to be the leaders in education and allied fields.

Many types of activities, he pointed out, are planned for students in honors programs in such institutions as Swarthmore, Skidmore, Antioch, and other institutions which now employ honors programs.

In these institutions conferences with instructors are employed in lieu of classes. Term papers are employed in lieu of examinations, and generally much more freedom is given to such students in the election of courses which they wish to pursue and in the course requirements themselves.

For the most part, the literature on honors programs reveals that these programs are concentrated in the upper two years of the under graduate program and that programs are developed along departmental lines, varying, perhaps, in scope and in type from one department to another.

At Indiana State Teachers College, Dr. Pratt points out, it is expected that as many as 50 to 100 gifted students might eventually be engaged in what may be termed an honors program.

One of the reasons for the need for an honors program at Indiana has been the increasingly selective program of admissions that the college has been following over the past several years.

Russian Language To Be Taught For First Time

Program opens 1957-8
With official approval

One of the innovations in instruction at the State Teachers College, Indiana, Pa., during the coming year will be the inauguration of an introductory course in the Russian language, to be taught by Dr. Edward W. Bieghler, according to Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college.

The beginning of this course is a result of a request from the United States Army to American colleges, which suggests that it would be to the advantage of the country to have persons trained to read the Russian language.

The introductory course on the Russian language which Dr. Bieghler will teach is designed to develop a reading knowledge of the language, Dr. Pratt explains.

This reading knowledge could be very helpful in the security of our country in that there would be a reservoir of people who could read Russian communications and make translations for the Army and various security forces.

Further than that, Dr. Pratt indicates, a reading knowledge of Russian on the part of a fair number of American people would enable people to establish a closer understanding of the Russian people themselves and would enable people to gain practice in exposing the propaganda of the Russian government.

This would, in addition, enable Americans to distinguish between the sincere expressions of opinion of the Russian people and propaganda of the Russian government.

President Pratt Guided Study Of Certification Requirements

Proposals which, if accepted by the State Council of Education, will make important changes in the teacher certification requirements throughout the public schools in the commonwealth have been filed with the State Council and the superintendent of public instruction in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the State Teachers College at Indiana, Pennsylvania, indicates that the report of the advisory committee on teacher certification has now been submitted to the State Council of Education and to the Pennsylvania superintendent of public instruction.

The advisory council, on which Dr. Pratt served as chairman, was comprised of 21 professional educators and laymen, including representatives of the four universities in Pennsylvania, the State Teachers Colleges, and the chief professional and lay organizations in the commonwealth.

The committee held its first meeting on January 23, 1956, and has in ensuing meetings made an exhaustive study into the present status of the certification of teachers both in Pennsylvania and throughout the nation.

The committee also made an attempt to determine the needs for certification in Pennsylvania and to advise which changes should be made in certification procedures now in effect.

Dr. Pratt did not reveal specific proposals that were made, but stated, however, that only suggestions for needed revisions have been given to the State Council of Education for consideration.

The function of the advisory committee on teacher certification was that of a study and advisory group, Dr. Pratt said. The committee met as a whole over a period of 18 months on 8 occasions for the most part for two-day periods.

In addition, many meetings of subcommittees were held during intervening months.

It is believed that this committee has made one of the most intensive and extensive studies of certification requirements ever to be made.

The proposals for change are included in a 59-page mimeographed report now turned over to the State Council of Education and Dr. Charles Boehm, superintendent of public instruction in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Alan H. Wetter, Philadelphia superintendent of schools, has indicated that the final report of the advisory committee on teacher certification in Pennsylvania, directed by Dr. Willis E. Pratt, is "one of the best to have been prepared anywhere in the country in recent years."

Dr. Wetter has commended the services of members of the committee and asserted that the greatest share of the commendation should go to Dr. Willis E. Pratt.

Dr. Wetter pointed out that the leadership of Dr. Pratt, his knowledge, inspiration, and untiring service were the factors that were most significant in the work of this committee.

The advisory committee on teacher certification has made an intensive and extensive study of teacher certification in Pennsylvania and has now turned this report over to the State Council of Education and the Pennsylvania State superintendent of public instruction, Dr. Charles Boehm.

G. S. A. Building Projects To Get Underway at College This Fall

Five building projects have been approved by the Pennsylvania General State Authority for the State Teachers College at Indiana, and these projects will likely get underway very late this fall, Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college, said today.

New fire towers will be erected in John Sutton Hall with work likely to begin in October.

Bids will be received for the science building and the music building about November 1, Dr. Pratt says. The science building will be located at the rear of the Wilson Hall Library in the vicinity of Keith School and the new Leonard Hall.

The music building will be constructed facing Eleventh Street where Richards House, Lewis House, and the college infirmary are now located. These houses will be moved one half block west and set down on college property.

The college will continue to use the buildings after they have been moved. An entrance off Oakland Avenue will be established into these relocated houses.

The new science building will contain the classrooms for science in general education classes and all the mathematics classes. The new music building will contain a number of classrooms for music plus a small concert hall and two rooms for art classes in general education.

It is supposed that the music building and the science building will be completed sometime during the 1958-59 term.

Bids for two new dormitories, one for men and one for women, will be received sometime early in December, Dr. Pratt states. These dormitories will be placed south of Grant Street on the location of the present tennis courts and baseball field.

The college will need to raze the Fleming House and the garages that extend toward the tennis courts from Grant Street. Both dormitories for men and women will house from 150 to 185 students. The new dormitories will be three stories high with a one-story lounge attached to each.

New garages for college equipment and additional storage space will be constructed at the rear of the college power plant. The college is in the process for making provisions for moving the tennis courts and baseball diamond to the new ten-acre property which the college purchased that extends south and west of the corner of Eleventh and Glass Streets.

Recently a survey and map of this new ten-acre plot has been furnished the college through the courtesy of the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Company. The present plans call for the construction of eight all-weather tennis courts on this property and a baseball field similar to that which the college now has.

For the next few years, Dr. Pratt said, the college will continue to use the college memorial field at its present location until future buildings are constructed in that area.

Eventually then the football field, possibly as far away as five years, will be moved to the new athletic area.

Indiana State Teachers College has now obtained a deed for 2½ acres of ground off Eleventh Street and south of Maple Street in Indiana. On this field, which the college had previously leased, there is constructed a soccer field.

The college has also obtained a deed to a 7½ acre tract south of this 2½ acre plot. The tennis courts and baseball diamond, now located on college memorial field, will be transferred to this new area before the spring of 1958, according to Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college.

The transfer of these facilities to the new area will be necessitated by the construction of new dormitories for men and women on the present location of the tennis courts and baseball diamond.

The football field will remain where it is, on the college memorial field off Grant and Eleventh Streets, for the present.

In addition to moving the baseball field and tennis courts, the college will have to eliminate what is now known as Fleming House on Eleventh Street and the college garages which are located in the vehicle entrance to memorial field on Grant Street.

During the past summer the Tinney Drilling Co. of 113 West Main Street, Grafton, West Virginia, drilled 149 test bore holes on the Indiana campus. These test bore holes were made on the sites where the new dormitories, science building, and new music building will be constructed.

Colonel T. I. Martin of ROTC Transferred

Colonel Talbert I. Martin, who has served as Professor of Military Science and Tactics of the ROTC unit at State Teachers College, Indiana, since August 1953, has departed to assume his new duties as Quartermaster Supply Officer at Belle Mead General Depot, Somerville, New Jersey.

During his tenure as PMS & T at Indiana State Teachers College, Colonel Martin has instigated numerous improvements which have greatly increased the effectiveness of the ROTC program as evidenced by the award of a Certificate of Achievement by Brigadier General A. W. Stuart, Commanding General of the US Army Military District Pennsylvania.

Colonel Martin graduated from Clemson College, Clemson, South Carolina, with a B.S. degree in Mechanical Engineering in 1937 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1941 and has served continuously since that time.

During World War II, Colonel Martin served overseas in North Africa and Italy from 1943 to 1946.

During the Korean conflict, the Colonel completed a two year tour of duty with the US Navy, serving as the only Army Officer on the staff of the Commander, Seventh Fleet in the Far East Command for thirteen months and the remainder of the period on the staff of the Commander, First Fleet in San Diego, California.

Colonel Martin's military schooling includes attendance and subsequent graduation from The Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1948, and the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Virginia, in 1951.

The Colonel is authorized the following awards and decorations: Navy Commendation Ribbon with Combat Distinguishing Device, American Defense Service Medal, American Campaign Medal, ETO Medal, WW II Victory Medal, Korean Service Medal, United Nations Service Medal.

Colonel Martin will be succeeded by Lt. Col. John V. D'Esposito who has been assistant PMST since August, 1954.

Dr. I. L. Stright has been appointed director of graduate studies at the State Teachers College, Indiana, Pennsylvania. Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college, has announced.

Dr. Stright has been serving as chairman of the graduate council which has formulated the policies and rules that will govern graduate work at Indiana State Teachers College.

Dr. Stright also serves as the director of the community-college studies series which the college at Indiana has been conducting for the past several years.

Dr. Stright has been a member of the mathematics faculty at Indiana State Teachers College since 1947.

In addition to his work as chairman of the graduate council and director of the community-college studies program, he has served as chairman of the Central-Western Education Conference, was president of the Indiana Faculty Association for the 1954-55 year, and was chairman of the President's Administrative Re-organization Committee.

Prior to coming to Indiana, Dr. Stright was professor of mathematics and chairman of the department for one year at Northern Michigan College, Marquette, Michigan. He served for a time as coordinator of the Navy V-12 program.

From 1942-46 he was associate professor of mathematics at Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, Ohio. From 1939-42 he taught mathematics in the Indiana High School. From 1935-39 he taught mathematics in Freedom High School in Beaver County, Pennsylvania.

Application forms for admission to the graduate school at Indiana State Teachers College may be obtained now by writing to Dr. I. L. Stright, Director of Graduate Studies, State Teachers College, Indiana, Pennsylvania.

In Revision of College Staff ISTC Grad Given Key Role

Dean S. T. Hadley Interviews Student

Dr. S. Trevor Hadley has been named dean of students at the State Teachers College, Indiana, Pennsylvania, according to Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college.

Previously Dr. Hadley's title had been that of director of student personnel services. In the revision of the administrative set-up of the college at Indiana looking toward expanded enrollment in the years ahead, the college administration has designated Dr. Hadley's position to be that of a dean of students.

"In conjunction with the dean of women and the dean of men, Dean Hadley will have supervising and collaborating duties in most areas which affect the student and the student's welfare while attending college at Indiana," Dr. Pratt pointed out.

"The application of the title, dean of students, distinguishes between the work of the dean who is directly relating to the student and student welfare and the work of the dean of instruction who is relating to the student in his curricular and academic work at Indiana."

Dr. Pratt stated, "The general direction in higher education has been to take more and more into account the entire activity of the student in relation to his college work and living as well as his academic work in classes."

"Although scholarship remains an important part of college, perhaps the most important single part," Dr. Pratt added, "the college at Indiana has been endeavoring over the past few years to pay increasing attention to the student in all of his relations both in curricular and in extra-curricular activities."

"Now that the college is in a period of rapid expansion, it appears to us to be the proper time to divide the dual roles of the dean of students who is in charge of the general welfare of the student as a human being and the dean of instruction who is looking to the general academic welfare of the student as a scholar."

Dr. Hadley, who will assume this new position as dean of students, has been employed as coordinator of research and director of the psychological clinic and as a psychology teacher at the Indiana State Teachers College for seven years.

For the past several years, he has been director of student personnel services. During his first two years at Indiana, he served as director of the veterans' guidance center.

During World War II he served for two years with the United States Air Force engaged in psychological research on psycho-motor and aptitude tests for air crew classification and as a psychiatric counselor in a convalescent mental hospital.

Prior to entering the Air Force, Dr. Hadley served as high school teacher and guidance counselor for four years at Allison Park near Pittsburgh. He also served for four years as high school principal at Allison Park High School.

Dr. Hadley received his bachelor of science degree from Indiana State Teachers College in 1937. He received his M.Ed degree from the University of Pittsburgh in 1941 and his Ed.D. degree from the University of Pittsburgh in 1952.

During the summer of 1954 he was visiting lecturer in psychology at the University of Illinois. He has been director and coordinator of a work-study course in Psychological Practicum at the Torrance State Mental Hospital at Torrance, Pennsylvania.

He is a research associate of the Psychological Corporation of New York City and is also a consultant for the Personnel Laboratory, 153 Lexington Avenue, New York City, in personnel testing.

Dr. Hadley is a member of the American Psychological Association, Phi Delta Kappa, Kappa Delta Pi, National Society for the Study of Education, the National Rehabilitation Society, the National Education Association, Pennsylvania State Education Association, and the American Association of University Professors.

He has written numerous education articles for such magazines as Educational Forum, Educational Administration and Supervision, and the Pennsylvania School Journal. He is editor of the research bulletin at Indiana State Teachers College.

Dr. Hadley has completed research studies in the field of interpersonal relations and their influence on school marking practices, the predictive value of several variables on student teaching success, and an analysis and evaluation of extra-curricular programs in Pennsylvania secondary schools.

Nancy Newkerk Becomes Fifth Dean of Women in ISTC History

Another Syracuse Graduate Succeeds Dean Faust

Nancy J. Newkerk, a graduate assistant in the student dean program at Syracuse University, has been named dean of women at the State Teachers College, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Dr. Willis E. Pratt, has announced.

She succeeds Martha C. Faust, who resigned to become dean of women at Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pennsylvania.

Miss Newkerk is the fifth dean of women in the 82 year history of the Indiana State Teachers College. Dean Jane Leonard served at Indiana from 1875-1920; Dean Hope Stewart served from 1920-1938; Dean Florence Kimball served from 1938-1951; and Dean Faust from 1951-1957.

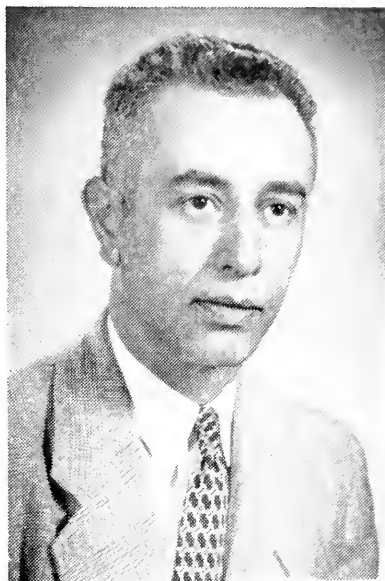

Dean Newkerk received her bachelor of music degree at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, in 1950 and her master of arts degree from Syracuse University in 1957. She has done additional study at Teachers College, Columbia University, and made a comparative education tour of Europe under the auspices of Potsdam (N.Y.) Teachers College.

The new dean of women is a native of Liberty, New York, from which community high school she graduated. At Syracuse University she completed two years of internship in student personnel work under the direction of Dr. M. Eunice Hilton.

During this time she held an assistantship in the office of the dean of women. She served also as a head resident in a student residence at Syracuse where she had sole charge of the house organization, counseling, and supervision of the students.

Prior to going to Syracuse, Dean Newkerk was elementary music supervisor at Goshen Central School, Goshen, New York, from 1950-55. She also served as counselor at Camp Allegro, Silver Lake, New Hampshire, and as counselor at Camp Townsend, Hunter Lake, New York.

In the years immediately after his graduation from Beaver Falls High School in 1936, Mr. Furguele worked for several years in the mining industry for Industrial Collieries Company at Heilwood.

During world War II he served from 1942-1946 for four years with the United States Army. More than a year was spent overseas in the European Theater of Operations.

He achieved the rank of first lieutenant in the United States Army. He now has the rank of captain in the United States Army Reserve and is commanding officer of Company B, 427th Engineer Construction Battalion.

After World War II he was proprietor of a restaurant in Windber for about a year.

In Indiana, Mr. Furgiuele has been very active as a member of the Indiana Unit of the General Alumni Association and served as president of this group for two years.

He has been active in the Indiana Boro Teachers Association, serving on important committees with that group. From May, 1955, to May, 1957, he was president of the Indiana State Teachers College General Alumni Association.

He is a member of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, National Education Association, and the National Council of Teachers in English.

Landsman Granted Danforth Fellowship

Jerome Leonard Landsman, music faculty member at State Teachers College, Indiana, Pennsylvania, is now doing graduate study at the University of Southern California on a Danforth Foundation fellowship, as one of 56 American college teachers in the third group of college teachers to receive a Danforth teacher study grant.

This program was first inaugurated by the Danforth Foundation in 1954. Of those who received awards along with Mr. Landsman, 21 are from state universities and colleges and 35 are from private and denominational colleges.

Twenty-six states are represented. Recipients are studying in graduate schools across the nation.

Danforth teachers are college instructors not over 40 years of age with at least three full years of successful teaching experience, who still lack their doctorates.

Each is nominated by the dean of his college with an institution permitted to make nominations according to the size of the student body and the nature of the organization.

The committee of selection for the Danforth Foundation includes eight educators representing large and small schools of various kinds.

Criteria for selection are intellectual promise, personality congenial to teaching, and searching inquiry within the Christian moral and ethical tradition.

The Foundation provides financial assistance and a relationship of encouragement. The group participates in a summer conference on moral and ethical teaching.

This Danforth teaching program is a significant part of the Foundation's inclusive effort to strengthen the total dimensions of American higher education.

The state teachers college at Indiana is very proud of the fact that Mr. Landsman has been one of the 56 American college teachers awarded a Danforth teacher study grant, according to Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college, and Dr. Ralph W. Cordier, dean of instruction.

Member of Class of 1938 Receives Doctorate from U. of Pittsburgh

Wins Doctor of Education

Earl S. Hoenstine, assistant director of student teaching, placement, and Keith School at the State Teachers College, Indiana, Pennsylvania, received his doctor of education degree Wednesday, June 12, 1957, from the University of Pittsburgh.

Hoenstine's thesis subject was entitled "Changes During The Student Teaching Experience In The Thinking Of Student Teachers About Teaching Practices, Personality Development, And Learning."

Dr. Hoenstine's major field was secondary education and his minor was in general education. His major advisor was Dr. Vernon Lingren.

Dr. Hoenstine was on the faculty at the Indiana State Teachers College as a supervising teacher in science and geography from 1947 until 1952, and since 1952 has been assistant director of student teaching, placement, and the Keith School.

Prior to coming to Indiana State Teachers College, he served as supervising principal during 1946-47 at Armagh Township Schools in Mifflin County. From 1941-45 he was with the United States Army Air Corps in the Central Pacific area.

From 1938-41 Dr. Hoenstine taught mathematics, health, and physical education at Claysburg High School. He also played baseball in this area and coached baseball and football at the high school.

Dr. Hoenstine graduated from Claysburg High School with the class of 1934. He received his bachelor of science in education degree from Indiana State Teachers College in 1938 and his master of education degree from Pennsylvania State University.

Dr. Hoenstine is married to the former Gladys Black of Claysburg. Dr. and Mrs. Hoenstine and son Samuel, age 10, daughter Phebe, age 5, reside at 519 Chestnut Street, Indiana, Pennsylvania.

During the 1956-57 college year, Dr. Hoenstine was president of the Indiana State Teachers College faculty club. He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, the Pennsylvania State Educational Association, National Education Association, the Indiana County Principals Association, and the Association for Student Teaching.

He has authored articles which have appeared in the Indiana Research Bulletin and the School Activities Magazine.

Dr. Hoenstine's doctoral dissertation is a study of the changes in the thinking of student teachers about (1) certain teaching practices, (2) aspects of personality development, and (3) principles of child and adolescent learning as measured by the test, "How I Teach."

This test was administered to all participants at the beginning of their student teaching experience. The test was administered again to the same sampling, one half taking it at the middle of the semester and the other half at the end of the semester.

Sixteen factors of their experience were also investigated by means of a questionnaire answered by 315 secondary education student teachers in 11 State Teachers Colleges of Pennsylvania.

He found that student teachers who received A grades in student teaching made more favorable changes than those who received C grades.

Changes in the thinking of student teachers who worked with several supervising teachers were more favorable than those who worked with only one or two.

Student teachers who had many hours in conferences with college supervisors made favorable changes in thinking while those who had only a few conferences made unfavorable changes.

The best changes in thinking about the areas measured in this study were made by student teachers who experienced from 11 to 15 hours of actual teaching per week.

The type of school according to control and selection of student appeared to be associated with changes in thinking about teaching practices and principles of learning. In these areas the public school on campus was associated with improved thinking.

Generally, thinking about teaching practices appeared to be favorably influenced when student teachers were enrolled concurrently in college classes, but thinking about principles of child and adolescent learning appeared to be unfavorably influenced. However, changes in thinking did not seem to be associated with enrollment in general and professional education courses at the time of student teaching.

Men made unfavorable changes in their thinking about principles of learning.

Student teachers who taught in junior high schools made changes in their thinking about teaching practices which were more favorable than the changes made by those who taught in senior high schools.

Students teachers who participated in three co-curricular activities improved their thinking about principles of child and adolescent learning.

PHILADELPHIA UNIT

● Mid-afternoon June 15, the Philadelphia Unit, despite the heat and humidity, held their annual picnic at the fine Hoehler home in Stratford. A feature of the occasion was a trip through the adjacent Valley Forge Park.

After partaking of box-lunches, the group was served delicious cakes, coffee, and ice cream. The Hoehlers served refreshing cool drinks throughout the evening.

After supper, the gentlemen tossed horse-shoes, discussed politics, or swapped yarns, while the members discussed days at Indiana and some vital current topics.

At the end of a business meeting called by president Mildred Cable, all were homeward bound by 9:30.

Counting husbands and two children there were 22 present, as follows:

PITTSBURGH UNIT

● Our year of 1957-58 is off to a good start with the program launched September third, by the president, Miss Elizabeth Piper, at the house of Mrs. William Bush (Margaret North).

When a guest there everyone visits the flower and vegetable gardens, and explores every nook inside from the rumpus room to garret.

The crowd was large, and interesting accounts of summer trips to California, Nova Scotia, Alaska, Key West, or to the outposts of Europe and around the globe, as well as events of summers at home with the family, held the attention of all.

A monthly meeting at the home of some member, with appropriate programs, terminated by the annual April dinner at the Pittsburgh College Club is the plan for the year.

Full support will be given to the Benefit Party to be held in the Blackridge Community Club by the Junior Group on October 19.

Plans are afoot for the Pittsburgh Unit's Benefit to be held at the Wilk-insburg Woman's Club on February 22, 1958.

We extend our best wishes to all alumni units for a successful and happy year.

CLASS OF 1905

● We thought this item might be of interest to the college alumni, and perhaps other Indiana organizations would adopt the same plan.

At a meeting of the class of 1905 I. S. N. S. held at Indiana State Teachers College, Alumni Day, May 25, 1957, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, that the 1905 Class Flower Fund be changed to the 1905 Class Memorial Library Book Fund.

Resolved, that a committee from the 1905 class consisting of our three officers, namely; President, Secretary and Treasurer be authorized to supervise adding to the college library, suitable books, properly inscribed, in honor and loving memory of departed members of our class.

Under this plan the first book has been donated to the college library in memory of Sue Humphreys, a member of the class of 1905, I. S. N. S. who passed away June 5, 1956.

Mame Moore Dougherty
Secretary, Class of 1905

CLASS OF 1902

● The Class of 1902 returned in May for their fifty-fifth reunion. Of the fifty-one members still living, thirty-one returned. Our adopted members, Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Fleck, Mrs. Lash, Paul Elder, Martha Jordan, and Mrs. Brown, were also with us.

The time passed too quickly and was made more pleasant by the cordiality of Dr. Pratt and other members of the school staff. We marvelled at the improvements made in the school in the last half century; then we hunted up the old familiar places—our old rooms, the grove, etc.

At the Alumni luncheon, our class response was ably delivered by Mr. Samuel Cunningham, although he had only ten minutes to think about it.

A dinner party was held at the Rustic Lodge on Saturday evening, where we spent the time in recollections, reading letters from absent members, and hearing about the families and children and grandchildren of those present.

The highlight of the evening was a talk given by Major Martha Jordan of the US Army Nurse Corps. She had charge of a field hospital from the invasion of France to the Battle of the Bulge in World War II. Her tribute to the American soldier and to her own father brought tears to all eyes—but they were soon dried by a shift to laughter.

On Sunday everyone left and the reunion was one more pleasant dream, but all are hoping to return in five years.

SIXTIETH REUNION

● At graduation, the Class of 1897 had 71 members. Of the 25 still living, ten came to celebrate their Sixtieth Anniversary. From a distance came Georgia Shane from Oregon, Dorothy Hill Miller from Florida, Grace Stewart from Illinois, Martha Hervey Erk from Washington, D. C., and Fannie Roller from Michigan. From Pennsylvania we had Daisy Duncan Warnshuis from Indiana, Lyde Johnson and Grace Lacock from Pittsburgh, J. C. Williams (our class president) from Johnstown, and W. S. Baker from Alexandria.

The adopted members who joined us were Besse Torrence DuBarry from Erie; Tweet Garman Burhenn from Jeannette; Mrs. H. H. Hauth, daughter of J. C. Williams, from Mt. Lebanon; and Louise Erk MacKenzie, daughter Joyce, and son John from Washington, D. C.

After the Alumni Luncheon, we held our Class Meeting in Jane E. Leonard Hall. The class roll was called and absentees accounted for. We were brought up-to-date upon those present and sadly agreed that this would probably be our last reunion.

We were thrilled by the evidence of the College's growth and at its plans for the future.

While the number of class donors to the library fund is not yet 100 per cent, we hope it will be at a later report.

Indiana Unit Homecoming Ball

In conjunction with the annual Indiana State Teachers College Homecoming the Indiana unit of the General Alumni Association is sponsoring a Homecoming ball and reunion at the Indiana country club scheduled for 9:00 p.m. October 12.

Paul McGregor of Indiana has been appointed chairman of the event by Mrs. Joseph Mazza, president of the Indiana alumni unit.

A committee serving with Mr. McGregor has developed the Homecoming ball and reunion idea as an outgrowth of the old fellows Homecoming stag affair, held at the Indiana country club in May of 1956.

This year the men have extended the program and elaborated the details to include wives or girl friends.

The program begins at 8:00 in the morning with golf at the country club from 8:00 to 12:30 p.m. From 10:00 a.m. to 11:30 there will be a ladies' coffee clatch.

The morning and noonday festivities at the country club will be over in time for the Homecoming parade at 1:00 and for the football game at 2:30 Mr. McGregor states.

Then from 5:30 p.m. till 7:00 p.m. there will be group dinners at various places in and about the community and from 7:00 to 9:00 there will be entertainment on the campus in Fisher Auditorium and other campus locations.

The Homecoming ball and reunion at the country club will begin promptly at 9:00 p.m., Mr. McGregor states.

Persons who have received a letter of invitation are urged to return their cards as soon as possible. Those who have not received letters are to get in touch with Mr. McGregor, Mrs. Mazza, or members of the committee.
